WORKING PAPERS

- 2021 Granular Gravity: Equity-Bond Returns & Correlation , Job Market Paper
- Investors care about the state of granularity, the heavy tail of firms' size distribution. I adapt and extend an existing granularity measure, and show that changes in granularity are negatively related to the cross-section of corporate bond returns. I verify that the risk-adjusted return on a strategy that provides effective hedge against granularity shocks is economically significant. I further document that the correlation between firms bond and equity returns is 50% higher when the economy becomes more granular than atomistic. Data supports the hypothesis that this arises from granularity being a priced factor in the cross-sections of both equity and corporate bond returns.

- 2020 Equity Prices in a Granular Economy, with Harjoat Bhamra, Christian Dorion & Alexandre Jeanneret
- This paper revisits the properties of the conditional CAPM when the economy is granular. When some firms are more like "grains" than atoms, shocks to such firms are not diversified away. When a large firm becomes larger, the economy becomes more granular, as the large firm represents a greater share of the market. This increase in granularity translates into a higher cross-sectional difference in equity betas, which reduces the slope of the Security Market Line (SML). We provide empirical support for the negative relation between the slope of the SML and various granularity measures from the U.S. equity market. When granularity decreases, portfolio betas are strongly and positively related to average equity returns. In contrast, the relation turns negative when granularity increases, thereby explaining the relatively "flat" SML observed unconditionally.
